

CHRistians In Secular Ministry

CHRISM

Living an Undivided Life

Tuesday 16th November 2021,

7:30 – 9:00 pm (a CHRISM Zoom Meeting)

Many Christians think that some parts of life matter more to God than others. Overcoming this divide releases the church into everyday mission in God's world. But what might this look like for Ministers in Secular Employment? Join Paul Woolley, Chief Executive at the London Institute for Contemporary Christianity (LICC), to consider ways to which God is working through us and those we know, on their frontlines, whoever and wherever they are.

Paul Woolley is CEO of LICC. Previously Deputy CEO of Bible Society, and the Founder of the think tank Theos, he's on a mission to help Christians integrate the gospel with all of life. Paul is married to Ruth, and they and their four children live in Wiltshire.
