Many people feel a calling from God to minister but believe that the main centre for that calling is among the people they work alongside each day. The secular environment offers a place for discipleship and pastoral care.

How is this calling supported?

Come and explore the future of
Ministry in Secular Employment

with us at our annual conference in Birmingham, led by our speaker John Lees.

The conference will include a short AGM.

About our Speaker

John has run church programmes on a wide range of topics including resilience, team and collaborative working, and leadership. He also works full-time as a career coach and author and has led workshops in a range of countries. He has written 13 books on work and careers including “How to Get a Job You Love.”

John serves as a Self-Supporting Minister in the Diocese of Exeter and is Bishop's Officer for Self-Supporting Ministry, having worked for 10 years previously in the Diocese of Chester. He is the author of Self-Supporting Ministry, a Practical Guide (SPCK, 2018), which forms the basis of our exploration.

About Us

CHRISM was founded in 1984 by a group of Christians with a vocation to ministry in the places where they work. CHRISM organises a conference and a Reflective Weekend each year and also publish the journal, 'Ministers at Work' four times a year. Through these we aim to support everyone with a calling to minister in the secular world.
